PINK HAY BALES OF HOPE

Antler Ridge Wildlife Sanctuary was the place to be on October 10, 2010. The sanctuary Hosted Pink Hay Bales of Hope a fund raiser to support Breast Cancer Awareness, and honor the many cancer survivor volunteers who dedicate much of their time caring for the animals at the sanctuary. It was a day of celebration of life, hope and courage. Pink warriors for the cause! Hay Bales were arranged into a large pink ribbon symbol and each hay bale was dedicated to a person, hope or dream. The event raised over $6,000 of which half was presented to Horizon of Hope a Longaberger event for the American Cancer Society in the hope to find a cure for Breast Cancer. Pictured above Kelly Simonetti (middle) presenting the $3,000 pink check to Longaberger consultants Joanne Stanton (left) and Lisa Benzia (right).

The day was filled with tarot card readings, yoga for the soul and a walk around the farm featuring the edible forest tour. The sanctuary also created its own "Pink glove video" By Ray Mueller productions. Mark your calendar for next year it will be even pinker! You can watch the pink glove video on you tube search for" antler ridge pink glove". Antler Ridge Wildlife Sanctuary will be having its annual Holiday Bazaar on Saturday & Sunday Dec 4 & 5 at the sanctuary. They will be selling many items such as their famous boxwood centerpiece crafts, food pictures with Santa and a NYC Horse and Carriage Ride. All monies from the event go towards caring for the many wildlife and other animals the Sanctuary cares for. Please support this worthily cause by doing your holiday shopping at the Sanctuary located at 52 County Road 661, Frelinghuysen NJ or call 973-980-8531 or visit the web site www.antler-ridge.com for additional details.
